Summer Lovin'

The responses to our July/August issue prove you people adore Alyssa Milano, Amish chicks, and, yes, even our weird little mascot.

Sweet 15

Wow, Alyssa Milano is 40 years old and hotter than ever! Thank you, Maxim, for making my longtime television crush a cover girl. Fifteen years between covers is definitely way too long!

—Paul, Erie, PA

We agree on all points, Paul. Alyssa is hotter than ever, and 15 years is way too long between covers. Being without Alyssa was like a prison sentence! (Actually, it wasn't like a prison sentence so much as it was a prison sentence. We swear, steal Tony Danza's identity once and they throw away the key.)

Pain in the Mascot

I'm curious about the half-angel, half-devil Maxim mascot. Does he have a name? Or any kind of backstory? You should set up a Facebook account for him.

—Anna Dole, via e-mail

Great question, Anna! His name is Little Max. Unfortunately he is prohibited by law from maintaining a social media presence due to an "incident" with MySpace Tom back in '02. More to come on his backstory just as soon as we can get him out of this Natty Light can. My, does the little rascal like to drink!

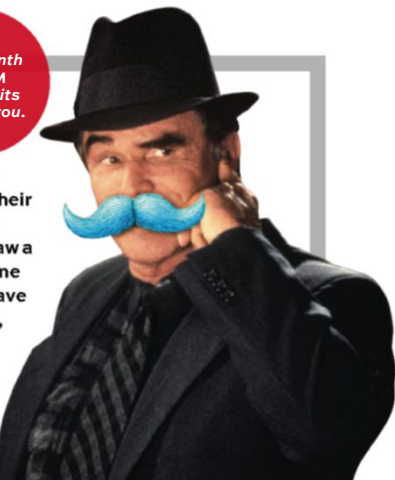

If I don't wear this in public, I get mobbed.

WE GOT IT IN THE MAIL

Instant 'Stache

When we received a bushel of temporary mustache tattoos, we were offended by their assumption of our inability to grow facial hair. But then we looked in a mirror and saw a sad, barren upper lip. So we slapped on one of their glittery pink mustache tats and have never felt more manly. Eat your heart out, Burt Reynolds. $7, stachetats.com

Each month MAXIM empties its sack for you.

YOU HAVE E-MAIL.

We have an in-box. Send your love and hate to: letters@maxim.com

Amish Paradise

I don't know how it all came about that a magazine like yours got hold of an Amish woman wanting to express her true self, but I think it's wonderful. I know the people in her faith don't believe in such things, and they think showing skin is a disgrace to the Almighty. On the contrary, it can be a glorification. Keep up the good work, and I wish Kate Stoltzfus all the glory and luck our modern world has to offer.

—Bill Bush, via e-mail

Our Amish editor responds: "Didst the devil send you, Master Bill? What is this 'e-mail' you write upon? And, follow-up question, dost thou know where my butter churner is? I swear I left it on top of the apple cart by the front door."

Burger Time

When are you guys gonna bring in the Wendy's redheaded cutie?

—Rick, Providence, R.I.

Good question, "Rick"—or should we say, Ronald McDonald? Listen, Ron, give it up. Wendy just isn't into you. She doesn't like clowns, and those pictures you tweeted her of your "McNuggets" did not go over well.

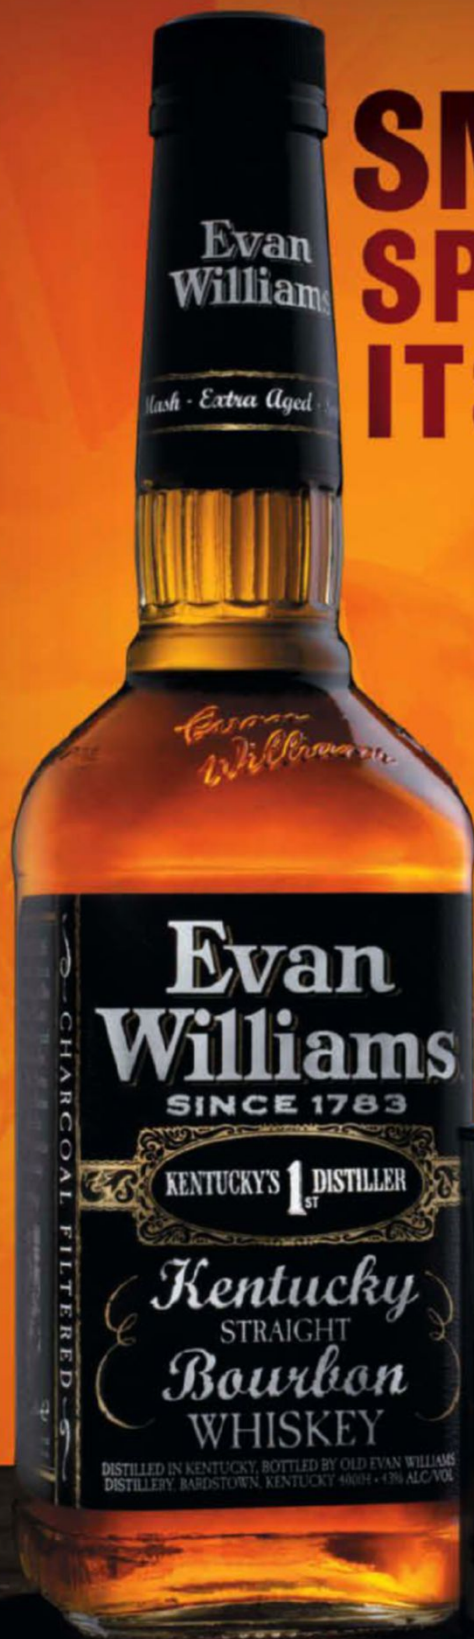

Breaking Mad

Re: "Breaking Bad: The Aftermath," I never thought Maxim would allow an article to stereotype any one group of people. I've been around meth my entire life. The article said meth users are toothless, have sores all over, destroy communities, are paranoid, take things apart, have dead grass, and leave syringes lying around. As far as toothless, sores, and paranoia go, you described someone on crack or heroin. As for taking things apart, dead grass, and destroying communities, you've described someone who wants to learn how things work or is too lazy to take care of their lawn. As far as meth users being "dicks," I've come across police, doctors, teachers, and judges who were all dicks. Hell, even my grandma can be a dick. Hell, I even think the person who wrote this article is a dick for not doing more research.

—Melanie, via e-mail

Keep calling your grandma a dick and she'll stop sending you homemade chocolate chip and meth cookies, Melanie.

UNIVERSAL TRUTHS

Space Oddities

We're kicking off World Space Week (October 4–10) with some fun(?) facts about the final frontier.

14

The number of known black holes in the universe. Apparently, the ones we fall into after a night out don't fit the description.

VACANCY

78,000

The number of applications received, in just two weeks, from people hoping to become the first settlers on Mars. Dutch organization Mars One will select seven to 10 candidates and shuttle them off on a one-way trip to the Red Planet in 2023. No backsies!

2028

The year a mile-wide asteroid known as 1997 XF11 is expected to barely miss colliding with the Earth's surface in what many experts anticipate will be the most exciting game of chicken in the history of the universe.

DOZENS

The estimated number of dead animals floating around space, including dogs, monkeys, and rabbits. The creatures were aboard test flights and never retrieved. Make a wish upon a shooting chimp corpse!

3,000 DEGREES

The temperature (in Fahrenheit) experienced by NASA shuttles in the hottest moments of atmospheric reentry during landing. We're pretty sure it got that hot at our cover shoot this month.

@Astro_Mike

The Twitter handle of Michael J. Massimino, the first astronaut to tweet from space, while aboard the shuttle Atlantis in 2009. We're still waiting for the first Instagram of artfully filtered astronaut ice cream.

$1,500,000.00

The winning auction bid for a trip to space with Leonardo DiCaprio. The winner, a Russian real estate mogul, will sit next to the actor on the Virgin Galactic's maiden voyage this fall. That's a lot of money just to fight over an armrest with the kid from Growing Pains.

"SHIT."

The first curse word said on the record in space. In 1969 astronaut Tom Stafford saw a moon crater he said was "bigger than shit." A reporter listening in asked astronaut Harrison Schmitt to clarify. He covered for his buddy by replying, "He said...bigger than Schmitt."

3.8 CENTIMETERS

Distance the moon moves away from Earth every year. Take the hint, Earth, and eat an Altoid.

HOT MESS

Bad Girl of the Month Club

Baseball Wives' Anna Benson is the grand slam of crazy.

Name: Anna Benson Age: 37 Charges: The bat-shitty estranged wife of former Mets pitcher Kris Benson allegedly showed up at her ex's home, pulled a gun on him, and demanded money. She was arrested and booked on aggravated assault with a weapon, criminal trespassing, and possession of a firearm. Are there worse crimes than being a Met?

All Hallow's Cleavage

As "sexy" Halloween outfits get weirder and weirder, we analyze the latest crop of odd erotic getups. Out with the naughty cops, in with the naughty cobs! by SARA BARRON

SEXY CORN ON THE COB

Who wears it: Farmers' daughters; University of Nebraska coeds.

What it means: Her motto is, You are what you eat.

Ideal complementary costume: A pat of butter.

Pickup line: "Hey, how would you like to go back to my place and shuck?"

Potential costume hazard: Calling her outfit

"husky" is accurate—but could get you in trouble.

SEXY CHEWBACCA

Who wears it: Attractive Star Wars geeks with a lot of body confidence. So, like, three people in the known universe.

What it means: She wants you to think of her as more than just a walking carpet.

Ideal complementary costume: Han Solo.

Pickup line: "My place or www.wuarrhh.com?"

Potential costume hazard: Fleas.

SEXY GEORGE WASHINGTON

Who wears it: American-history buffs.

What it means: The only thing she values above patriotism is cleavage.

Ideal complementary costume: John Adams.

Pickup line: "I cannot tell a lie. I'd really like to chop down your cherry tree."

Potential costume hazard: Getting splinters you-know-where from wooden teeth.

Heavy Metal Hernia

Metallica gets in your face (and other body parts) with an epic 3D concert movie.

“We realized if we were going to do a concert film, we wanted a dramatic arc so it would be refreshing,” says Metallica drummer Lars Ulrich of this month’s Through the Never. “We didn’t want just backstage footage of guys in a prayer circle. We didn’t want the Justin Bieber movie.”

Shot in 3D IMAX and set against an arena show in an unnamed city, the movie follows a hapless (possibly drugged-out) roadie as he fights his way through a postapocalyptic uprising. Think Fight Club meets This Is Spinal Tap, but louder.

“We used to do these crazy theatrical shows with statues and crosses. A lot of it was very Spinal Tap-ish,” admits Ulrich. “But a lot of our present audience wasn’t around then, so we thought we’d bring it back with new technology.”

The result is...heavy. Shot over several weeks in Canada, its greatest-hits set puts you in the thick of the action, which may cause a mild case of tinnitus and motion sickness. “We wanted it to feel like you’re onstage with us,” says Ulrich. “When we began the project, we knew we wanted to do something no one has seen before. I think we did that.”

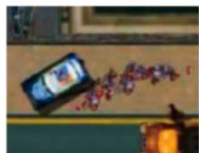

GTA: Then and Now

From the carnage of the early days to the customizable universe of today, GRAND THEFT AUTO has always offered more than mere car-stealin’. Here, past glory and a peek at GTAV. by JOHN SCIARRINO

(Car)Jacking Off GTA, 1997

Ah, yes, that just-stolen new-car smell. That’s what made the original GTA great, and it’s still one of our favorite pastimes. You may be able to bike, golf, swim, and sky-dive in GTAV, but the game is still called Grand Theft Auto for a reason.

Killer Cameos GTA2, 1999

You can’t have a GTA without some cameos and puns. GTA2’s Disgraceland covered both and gave us a reason to run down Elvis. In GTAV, Elvis may have left the building, but we’re more than happy to get a Kate Upton doppelgänger instead.

Getting Busy in the Backseat GTAIII, 2001

GTAIII’s shift to a 3D open-world sandbox meant a new emphasis on exploration. The fan-favorite area to explore? The red-light district. What was a novelty back then is now a staple: In GTAV, when this hijacked van’s a-rockin’, don’t come a-knockin’.

Experiencing the Joy of Home Ownership

GTA: Vice City, 2002

Tough times don’t keep a gangster from having a place to hang his hat. Vice City’s Tommy Vercetti had an epic Scarface-like homestead, but you can still score a killer pad in GTAV, even if it’s overrun with your bratty kids.

Kicking It With Your BFFs GTAIV, 2008

GTAIV let you race, shoot, and wreak havoc with your buddies, and GTAV promises even more ways to cause carnage with your crew in its new multiplayer mode, GTA Online. You know, provided you actually have friends. Call us?

As our lives get busier, it's important to take a step back, release from responsibility and be carefree.

It keeps us positive. Laid back. And grounded. Everyone calls these moments different things. We like to think of them as beaches.

No matter where you find yourself,

Find your beach

Please drink responsibly.

24 Hours to Live

Danny Trejo

Hollywood's toughest mofo—and the star of Machete Kills—faces his final day.

How do you want to go?

Not sure, but I'd like to go quick. And laughing out loud.

You always play the quintessential tough guy.

Who do you think is the toughest dude in heaven and why?

God. He runs the place!

What about in hell?

If I get there, I'm going to be the toughest guy.

You've been working almost constantly since you started acting in '85. Do you hope they make movies in the afterlife so you can keep it up?

I hope so; otherwise it's going to be pretty boring. I don't float on clouds, and I hate harp music.

What has dying on-screen taught you about dying in real life?

Nothing, because I always come back.

While you were alive, what did you spend the most money on?

Cars!

Name one thing you're glad you'll never have to do again on Earth.

Go to prison.

What is the wildest thing you ever did while you were alive?

Witnessing my daughter's birth.

Your tattoos are legendary.

Would you go out and get any fresh ink on your last day?

Yes. It would say I LOVE GOD, so He'll agree to take me.

Besides a machete, you've wielded almost every weapon imaginable on-screen. Any you'd like to be buried with?

No, the machete is the coolest one.

What woman did you always want to sleep with?

I don't have any more fantasies. I just like to be with a woman whose company I enjoy.

What are people saying over your casket?

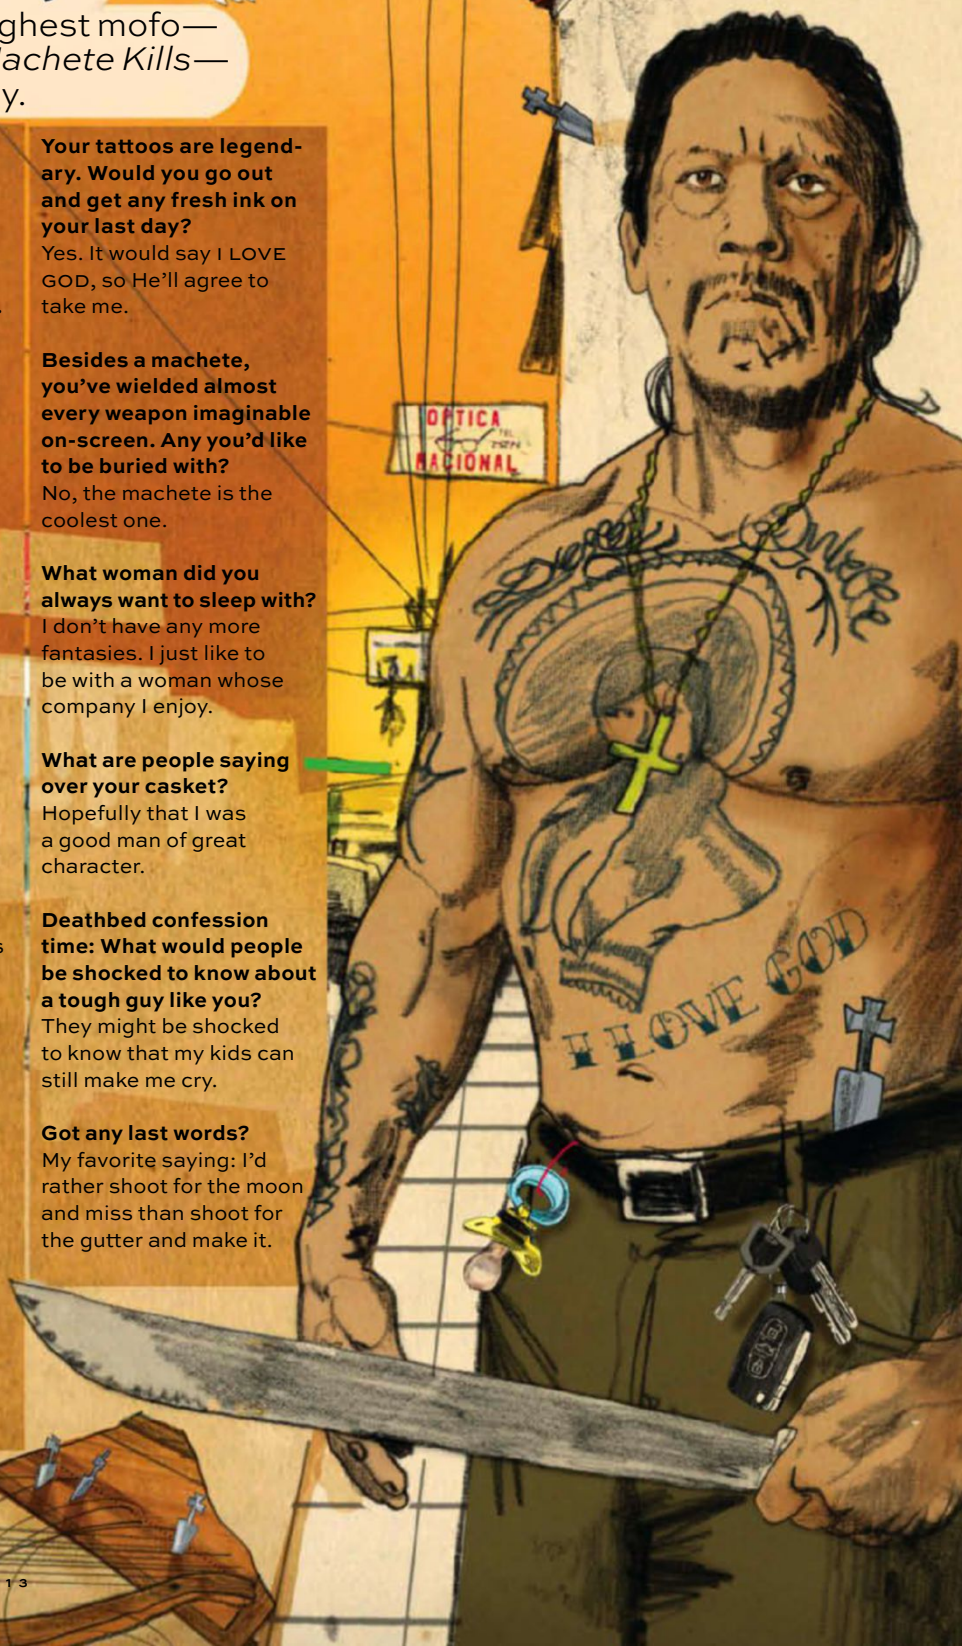

Hopefully that I was a good man of great character.

Deathbed confession time: What would people be shocked to know about a tough guy like you?

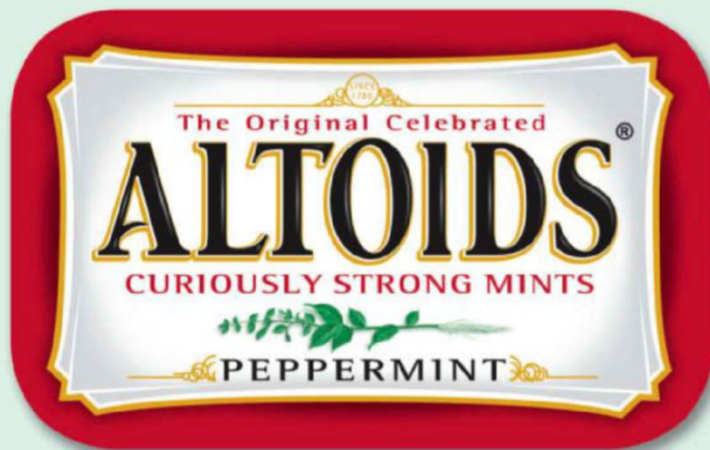

They might be shocked to know that my kids can still make me cry.

Got any last words?

My favorite saying: I'd rather shoot for the moon and miss than shoot for the gutter and make it.

A full-page photograph of actress Nina Dobrev. She is standing on a sandy beach, wearing a vibrant, multi-colored floral bikini. She has long dark hair and is wearing dark sunglasses. She is holding a smartphone in her left hand. The background shows a beach setting with a white canopy tent partially visible.

Nina Dobrev

In real life the Vampire Diaries fanged creature is all beauty, no bite.

We always considered Count Chocula the most sensual vampire of them all, but then we saw a photo of Nina Dobrev in a bikini, and that changed a lot for us. True, Nina isn't a real bloodsucker, but since she plays two of them on The Vampire Diaries (as Elena Gilbert and her evil doppelgänger, Katherine Pierce), we think that more than qualifies her to drink from the "World's Hottest Vampire" coffee cup. The 24-year-old actress will be wearing her fangs once again when Season 5 premieres on the CW on October 10. As for the bikini? Maybe she can lend it to Count Chocula.

Oktoberfest in Your Belly

We tasted and reviewed German beers until our lederhosen split. Here's what we swallowed and what we spit.

Bayerischer Bahnhof Berliner Weisse

This wheat beer is sour-mashed to give it its trademark tartness. Prepare to pucker!
Tester's take: "As sour as German poop porn. Nein, danke!"

Schneider Weisse

With a hint of banana and nutmeg, this ale is perfect for a sausage party. The wurst kind.
Tester's take: "Not as pungent as some weisses. Nice bit of sweet to go with the meat."

Warsteiner Premium Verum

This classic German pilsner is brewed with slightly tart hops and natural spring water.
Tester's take: "Subtle, really pleasing, and so damn easy to drink it scares me a little."

Aecht Schlenkerla Märzen

This smoked rauchbier is brewed with smoke malt to give it a salty, charred flavor.
Tester's take: "Is that bacon?! I'd like to pair this with a side of pancakes."

Spaten Oktoberfest Ur-Märzen

The world's first Oktoberfest beer is a medium pale ale so traditional it should wear a dirndl.
Tester's take: "This beer tastes like a genuine, beery, beerful beer."

Reissdorf Kölsch

A true Kölsch that's brewed in Cologne, this crisp lager should be drunk well into summer. It's the beer that keeps on giving.
Tester's take: "Bitter as my ex, but, as with her, I keep going back to it!"

GOT A QUESTION?
Send it to ask@maxim.com

Why do I forget my dreams as soon as I wake up?

—William Khounsombath

Two reasons. One: Since dreams are a function of our unconscious, we can't directly access them while we're awake. "If you recall certain fragments, your unconscious is trying to tell you something," psychoanalyst Carole Lieberman, M.D., tells us. Which brings us to two: So psychoanalysts can get paid for listening to your boring dreams.

Why are letters on a keyboard laid out that way?

—Doug Greenberg

"The theories are that it was created to prevent typewriters from jamming up by separating commonly used letters, or telegraph operators designed it to reduce finger movement," says Andrew Hsu, Ph.D., product strategist for Synaptics. Either way, it became standard in 1893 after a five-way typewriter-company merger—hot!

Is it possible to fart, cough, and sneeze all at once?

—Frank Ranallo

Sadly, it's yet another threesome you'll never see materialize. Coughing and sneezing use the same muscles and reflexes, so they can't happen simultaneously, according to Marc I. Leavey, M.D., at Mercy Medical Center in Baltimore. But happily for our inquisitive readers, he adds, "These same muscles increase intra-abdominal pressure, which could encourage the expulsion of gas." Two out of three ain't bad! (Except for whoever is sitting next to you.)

Percentage of women who say they've had a relationship with someone they met at a bar. Beer goggles work both ways.

Three cowboys are sitting around a campfire telling stories of their bravado. Tom, the hand from Wyoming, says, "I must be the strongest, meanest, toughest cowboy there is. The other day a bull got loose in the corral. It gored six men before I wrestled it to the ground by the horns with my bare hands and castrated that sucker with my teeth." Ben, from Idaho, can't stand to be bested. "That's nothing. I was walking down the trail yesterday, and a 15-foot diamondback rattler slid out from under a rock and made a move for me. I grabbed that bastard with my bare hands, bit off its head, sucked the poison down in one gulp, and didn't even get a bellyache." Old Snake River Frank, the cowboy from Texas, remains silent, slowly stoking the campfire coals with his penis. —RUSSELL DROUILLARD

HOW TO

Visit RoswellSightings.com and upload your own UFO photos to their map!

Spot a UFO

KIERAN DICKSON of UFO-hunting Web site RoswellSightings.com has some tips for having your own close encounter (no flying bicycles required!).

FIND THEIR HANGOUTS

"The Southwest has been a hot spot for sightings since the 1940s. A ton of UFOs are reported in Texas, which makes sense, since it's big and remote, and I think people get a bit lonely out there. Generally, though, folks tend to see UFOs when they're out fishing or hiking and relatively isolated."

KEEP ROLLING

"If you're in an area where you suspect UFO activity, set up a time-lapse camera. Russell Crowe was actually using one to film fruit bats at his place in Australia and noticed that a strange object kept appearing in the sky, so he posted it on Twitter to see if there could be an explanation."

WATCH THEIR MOVES

"People rarely report seeing vivid colors. It's usually a bright white light or something that has an orange glow. To us the most interesting sightings are of objects moving erratically at a speed that a plane or helicopter can't move. The zigzagging ones are what really freak people out."

GET WITNESSES

"One guy in the swamps doesn't have much credibility. But in cases like the Phoenix Lights or the 1952 Washington, D.C. incident when multiple people, including military personnel and pilots, reported seeing the same things from across the city, those can launch an investigation."

Sightings from Washington, D.C., Tehran, L.A., Stockholm, Istanbul... Aliens must have a terrific frequent flyer program.

How To

Wash it down with a Lipitor milkshake.

Make a Bacon-Weave Breakfast Burrito

NICK, extreme food blogger at DudeFoods.com, gives you a greasy, bacon-y reason never to skip breakfast.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 lb. bacon
- 4 eggs
- 1 cup shredded cheese
- Hash browns, to taste
- 4 diced breakfast sausages
- ¼ cup diced bell peppers

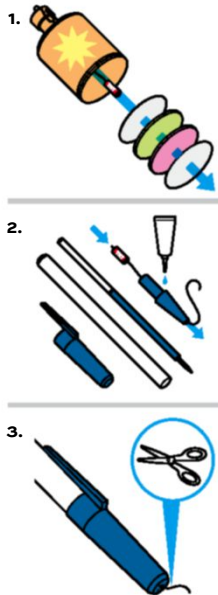

1 Take a pound of bacon and weave it into a square. Start by layering the strips vertically. Then interlace them with horizontal strips—like the top of one of your grandma's pies.

2 Preheat your oven to 375°F, put your bacon weave on a baking sheet, and throw it in for 10 minutes.

3 While your bacon is cooking, scramble your eggs and top them with cheese, hash browns, sausage chunks, diced bell peppers, and anything else you want. Everything goes with bacon!

4 Pull your weave out of the oven, dab with paper towels, and pile on your toppings. Fold it into burrito form, wrap it in foil, and put it back in the oven for 25 minutes.

5 Grab a knife, slice your breakfast burrito in half, and enjoy, with your cardiologist ready on speed dial.

Build a Detonating Pen

Tired of people taking pens from your desk? Make sure the next time will be their last!

Supplies:

- 1 champagne popper with pull-string trigger
- 1 plastic ballpoint pen
- Safety glasses
- Glue
- Scissors
- Pushpin
- Earplugs

1 Remove all streamers from the popper. Put on your goggles and remove the tape around the neck where the trigger string hangs out. Cut out a side section of the popper from the front. Slowly slide out the explosive charge. Don't yank it!

2 Disassemble a pen, but don't remove the rear-end cap. Slide the party-popper trigger through the tip from the back, replacing the ink cartridge. Glue it in place if the tip doesn't screw back on.

3 Run the string through the end of the pen cap, making a hole with a pushpin if it doesn't have one. Cap the pen, cut off excess string, and then leave your desk and wait for the explosion in the pen tip (and the thief's shorts).

Please, Ma, can we keep him? Please?

Escape a Road Ambush

ROD GREEN wheels you out in The Dangerous Book for Men.

You don't have to be in the Special Forces to get ambushed. Maybe you just took a wrong turn in Tijuana and now you're a walking ransom payday. So if you encounter an unexpected roadblock or if several vehicles simultaneously close in on you—surprise! You're the target. Here's your strategy for survival.

➔ Make a quick assessment. If you think you're the subject of a kidnap for ransom, surrendering may be the least painful option.

➔ If bullets are flying, prepare for impact. Duck down and grip the wheel with your thumbs to keep as much out of harm's way as possible. Put your lights on full beam to blind the bad guys.

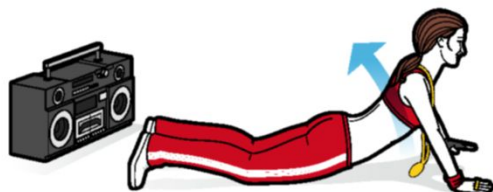

➔ If you have the space and time to drive out of trouble, make a Y-turn: Just brake and reverse into a 90-degree turn before speeding off.

➔ Your last option could be deadly, but it's time to ram. Cut your speed, put the car in its lowest gear, and deactivate airbags. Aim between back wheel and back bumper, accelerate, and make your move. Don't worry about blinkers!

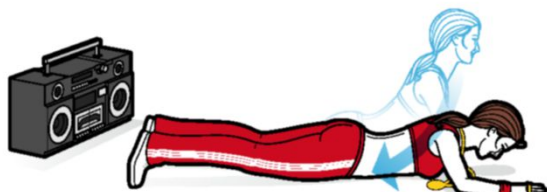

Do the Worm

Geek goddess CANDACE BAILEY teaches you how to get wriggly.

1 DOWN AND ARCH “Get on your knees with your legs spread shoulder width apart. Lean back to give yourself some momentum so that when you roll, you can achieve some height.”

2 ROLL OUT “Roll forward onto your hands in a push-up position, with your legs straight behind you. It’s like rowing with your arms—if you do it right, there’s practically no way to hurt your elbows.”

3 GET UP “Use the momentum to kick up your feet and push up your arms at the same time, getting air between you and the floor. The arms move you forward; the legs give you height.”

REPEAT “Do it again, as many times as you can till you get tired...or bang your head into the wall.”

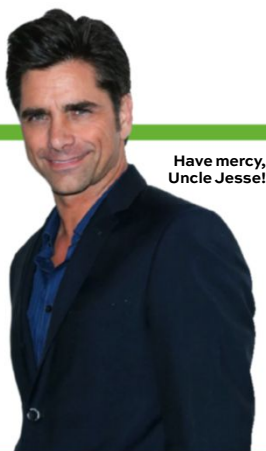

This is a variation called the Slug. Warning: May result in pregnancy.

Lose Your Virginity

On the new Web series *Losing Your Virginity With JOHN STAMOS, the host shares celeb tales of love at first thrust. Here’s his own.

“I lost my virginity to my friend’s older sister. She was 27, and I was a not-very-advanced 17-year-old. I thought, Hey, if she’ll go for it with me, she’ll do my friends, too. So I brought them back to her place later that night, and she’s like, ‘Get the hell out of here.’”

Have mercy, Uncle Jesse!

Make a Boozy Bottle Rocket

New Orleans barman STEVE YAMADA on how to cap your own pocket-size cocktails.

WHAT YOU’LL NEED FOR A “SHOT AND A BEER”

- The Fizz Giz: A carbonator to charge liquids with CO₂ ($29, fizzgiz.com)
- 2 oz. Rittenhouse rye whiskey
- 1 oz. beer syrup (2 bottles IPA reduced in half on the stove, then cooled and stirred with 1 cup sugar)
- ¼ oz. Cointreau
- 2 dashes Angostura bitters
- ¼ cup water
- Pinch of citric acid

1 Funnel all ingredients into a large, clean plastic bottle.

2 Charge it with the Fizz Giz and shake, then chill for at least six hours.

3 Open the bottle slowly and funnel into a clean mini beer bottle. Cap it, share with a lady, and then have a burping contest!

Get Bucked Up

PBR bull rider SHANE PROCTOR helps get your bod rodeo-ready.

1 PRACTICE BULL SITTING
“Training is dangerous, since you can get hurt and miss the competition. If you’re a beginner, just visualize yourself on the animal and go through the movements in front of a mirror. It looks funny, but get used to it!”

3 WORK YOUR GROIN
“Bull riding engages your groin muscles, and one of the best ways to strengthen them is by riding a horse without a saddle, which also teaches you how to move with an animal. If your legs stay tight while you’re on the bull, it wins every time.”

2 DON'T GET SO PUMPED UP
“I’ll go to the gym once or twice a week for cardio and core work. I’ll do planks and a lot of moves with a medicine ball. Remember, you don’t want a lot of weight up top, so any upper-body exercises should be done in moderation.”

4 SLIP INTO SOME YOGA PANTS
“I take two yoga classes a week for flexibility. We’re put in a lot of awkward positions on the bull and when we get thrown off, so you have to be a bit of a gymnast and acrobat. Yoga is great for strengthening your core and working on balance.”

Millions Demand America's Purest Silver Dollar. Shouldn't You?

Secure Your New 2013 Silver Eagles Now!

Millions of people collect the American Eagle Silver Dollar. In fact it's been the country's most popular Silver Dollar for over two decades. Try as they might, that makes it a very hard "secret" to keep quiet. And right now, many of those same people are lining up to secure the new 2013 U.S. Eagle Silver Dollars — placing their orders now to ensure that they get America's newest Silver Dollar — in stunning Brilliant Uncirculated condition — before millions of others beat them to it.

America's Newest U.S. Eagle Silver Dollar

This is a newest release of one of the most beautiful silver coins in the world. Today you have the opportunity to secure these massive, hefty one full Troy ounce U.S. Silver Dollars in stunning Brilliant Uncirculated condition. These legal tender United States Silver Dollars feature a nearly 100-year-old design of Lady Liberty striding confidently forward while draped in a U.S. flag, while the other side depicts a majestic U.S. eagle, thirteen stars, and an American shield. But the clock is ticking.

The Most Affordable Precious Metal— GOVERNMENT GUARANTEED

Silver is by far the most affordable of all precious metals — and each full Troy ounce American Eagle Silver Dollar is government-guaranteed for its 99.9% purity, authenticity, and legal tender status.

A Coin Flip You Can't Afford to Lose

Why are we releasing the most popular silver dollar in America for a remarkably affordable price? We're doing it to introduce you to what hundreds of thousands of smart collectors and satisfied customers have known since 1984 — New York Mint is the place to find the world's finest coins.

Timing is Everything

Our advice? Keep this to yourself. Tear out the page if you have to, because the more people who know about this offer, the worse it is for you. Demand for Silver Eagles in recent years has shattered records. Experts predict that 2013 Silver Eagles may break them all over again. Supplies are limited and there is a strict limit of 40 per household.

30-Day Money-Back Guarantee

You must be 100% satisfied with your 2013 Brilliant Uncirculated American Eagle Silver Dollars or return them within 30 days of receipt for a prompt refund (less all s/h). Don't miss out on this limited release. Call immediately to secure these American Eagle Silver Dollars ahead of the crowd.

"Oh, deer!"

Stops Here

Your dinner won't know what hit it thanks to the HOYT SPYDER 30 COMPOUND BOW.

You are a ghost of the woods. You are a silent killer who stalks his prey like a greased-up ninja robot. You slowly pull back the arrow, ready to pierce the life out of the hapless whitetail who had the grave misfortune of crossing your path when... Damn it, the bastard ran away! Yeah, it sometimes takes little more than the ever-so-slight sound of a vibrating bow to tip a deer off to his impending doom—which is why silence is as much a weapon as, well, your weapon. Thankfully, this compound bow is about as quiet as they come. The Hoyt Spyder 30's ridiculously compact and lightweight (under four pounds!) design features a vibration-vanquishing brake that catches the just-released limbs, muffling their movements and letting you send off smoother shots without sacrificing accuracy and feel. The result? That wily buck with the Superman-like hearing will have no idea what's happening till it's too late. (By the way, we're pretty sure this isn't the first time you've been called silent but deadly.) $999, hoyt.com

Know Before You Bow

Bow-hunting expert BART BIEDINGER bagged his first deer at 13. Let him school you on channeling your inner Robin Hood.

HIT A PRO SHOP

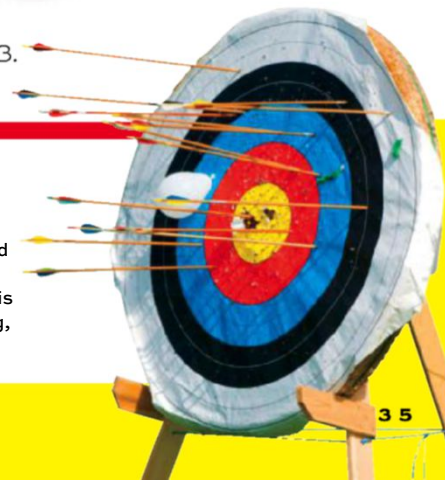

"It doesn't have to be an archery-only shop, but if it's a place like Dick's Sporting Goods, make sure there's an archery-dedicated person—otherwise they're not going to get you everything you need."

HIT THE RANGE

"The majority of pro shops have an indoor range, and any of the trained staff can teach you how to shoot. They'll make sure you know how to use the bow before you walk out the door."

HIT SOME DEER

"There are Department of Fish and Wildlife Web sites that let you know all the land where it's legal to hunt. The great thing about the sport is that anyone—tall, short, big, small, boy, girl—can do it."

Game Gear

If you're armed with the latest in hunting gadgets, Bambi's mom won't stand a chance.

Bushnell Fusion 1 Mile ARC (8x 32 mm Model)

To supercharge the sense of sight, most species have to spend millions of years in the brutal bog of evolution. Humans? We just pick up a pair of binoculars. These 8x zoomers don't just let you cheat Darwin—they also double as a one-mile laser range-finder for spotting the precise distance to your dinner. $1,000, bushnell.com

Oakley King's Camo Flak Jacket XLJ Sunglasses

Pitch-perfect optics for homing in on your prey? Check. A light 1 oz. build that won't cramp your nose after a day in the woods? Check. A sweet camo design that makes fellow hunters think your face is a talking bush? Check, check. $155, oakley.com

Buck Knives Zipper

The little things really do make all the difference: flowers for her birthday, breakfast in bed, and the tiny hooked tip on this four-inch blade, which makes it extra easy to slice open a boar's gut and leave the intestines behind (sorry if you were eating lunch). $105, buckknives.com

Garmin Rino 655t GPS

If you're lost in the woods, chances are you'd trade a bar of gold for a bar of phone service (sexting is a great way to kill time while you wait to be rescued). This outdoor GPS uses satellites and an integrated electronic compass to guide you, and it acts as a two-way radio for deep-woods gabfests. $600, garmin.com

Under Armour ColdGear Infrared Jacket

Until we get our invisibility cloak, this Predator-grade camo jacket will have to do. A scattershot of limbs and a hazy backdrop create an illusion of depth, while the light-dark contrast hides you under any level of sunlight. Wear it to terrify your gardener. $200, ua.com

Blackhawk! Warrior Wear Base Layer

Superhero tights aren't just for branding: Base layers also serve as a second skin to wick away sweat and keep you warm with minimal poundage. This layer offers a killer dose of climate-control comfort while doubling as a deer-scarer by popping your pecs to epic effect. $40, blackhawk.com

How to Outsmart a Millionaire

Only the "Robin Hood of Watchmakers" can steal the spotlight from a luxury legend for under $200!

I wasn't looking for trouble. I sat in a café, sipping my espresso and enjoying the quiet. Then it got noisy. Mr. Bigshot rolled up in a roaring high-performance Italian sports car, dropping attitude like his $14,000 watch made it okay for him to be rude. That's when I decided to roll up my sleeves and teach him a lesson.

"Nice watch," I said, pointing to his and holding up mine. He nodded like we belonged to the same club. We did, but he literally paid 100 times more for his membership. Bigshot bragged about his five-figure purchase, a luxury heavyweight from the titan of high-priced timepieces. I told him that mine was the Stauer Corso, a 27-jewel automatic classic now available for only $179. And just like that, the man was at a loss for words.

Think of Stauer as the "Robin Hood of Watchmakers." We believe everyone deserves a watch of uncompromising precision, impressive performance and the most elegant styling. You deserve a watch that can hold its own against the luxury classics for a fraction of the price. You'll feel the quality as soon as you put it on your wrist. This is an expertly-crafted time machine... not a cry for attention.

Wear a mechanical masterpiece for only $179! Our customers have outgrown the need to show off. They have nothing to prove; they have already proved it. They want superb quality and astonishing value. And that's exactly what we deliver.

The Stauer Corso is proof that the worth of a watch doesn't depend on the size of its price tag. Our factory spent over $40 million on Swiss-made machinery to insure the highest quality parts. Each timepiece takes six months and over 200 individual precision parts to create the complex assembly. Peer through the exhibition back to see the 27-jeweled automatic movement in action and you'll understand why we can only offer the Corso in a limited edition.

Our specialty is vintage automatic movements. The Corso is driven by a self-winding design, inspired by a 1923 patent. Your watch will never need batteries. Every second of power is generated by the movement of your body. The dial features a trio of complications including a graphic day/night display. The Corso secures with a two-toned stainless steel bracelet and is water-resistant to 3 ATM.

Your satisfaction is 100% guaranteed. Test drive the Stauer Corso. If you don't love it, send it back within 30 days and we'll refund every dollar of your purchase price. And you're welcome to keep the $99 sunglasses as our gift! Spending more doesn't make you smarter. But saving thousands on a watch this stunning will leave you feeling (and looking) like a genius!

The Voice and The Body

She's a pop music icon, is back as a coach on The Voice, and is at her hottest ever.
Sex goddess CHRISTINA AGUILERA has got us spinning in our chairs.

by DAN BOVA photographs by MARK LIDDELL

There are only a handful of performers who are recognizable from one name alone. And since doing a sexy photo shoot of Sting didn't seem like a great idea, we'd like to reintroduce you to someone known simply as Christina. Yes, for the third time in Maxim's history, the stunningly gorgeous songstress with the best pipes in the business is gracing our cover. And if we say so ourselves, she looks sexier than ever. The 32-year-old is at the top of her career, starring as a judge/coach on the new season of The Voice; producing her latest perfume, Unforgettable; and even spending time in Rwanda as a UN ambassador for the World Food Program. All that and she even found the time to give us a surefire way to get her in the mood. (Hint: It involves a dairy product.)

Welcome back to the cover of Maxim. We missed you!

Thank you. It's exciting to be back! I think at this point in my life it's all about celebrating my sexuality. And let's be honest, I've never been one to shy away from my sexuality.

That could be the understatement of the year.

Exactly. My first Maxim cover came out when I was about 21 and just chomping at the bit, ready to come out of my cage and explore my independence. My second one was a couple of years later, and now, at this point in my life, I'm even more comfortable in my own skin. It was nice to unleash the inner Christina and let her come out and play. As a woman, with age comes the freedom of knowing exactly what you want.

How do you define sexy?

I'm such a down-to-earth girl, I'm comfortable in just a jersey and boy's underwear. Trying too hard to be sexy is the worst thing you can do. Sexiness should be effortless.

Is sexiness something that can't be taught?

God, that's a loaded question! Let me put it this way: On The Voice we start off blind. The coaches can't see anybody, but there's always a feeling you get from somebody's voice. So I think when you have it innately, it's bound to show up. Society has so many different opinions about what's sexy, provocative, and trashy versus classy. I've definitely run the gamut of exploring and getting so many different opinions out of people.

If your famous triple kiss with Madonna and Britney Spears at the 2003 VMAs happened today, would it be such a big deal?

I think with time people's senses get more and more numb to the shock value of things. Provocativeness is so casual now. You had Katy Perry's "I Kissed a Girl" on the radio, and Rihanna is so comfortable about her sexuality. I had a girl crush on her for a hot minute, by the way, because I love females who go for it and aren't afraid to piss people off. But that particular event with Madonna I barely even recall, to be honest. I'm all about real connection and fantasy and role-playing.

How should a guy introduce something different in the bedroom?

Everything should be open for conversation, especially if two partners have been together for a long time. But you can't force your ideas on someone. If you sense your partner is uncomfortable, then approach it in a different way or let it go for now.

Does a guy need to be able to sing to turn you on?

Not at all! The quickest way for me to feel weird and run for the hills is if somebody sits down and serenades me with a guitar. It's not my thing.

So what guys do you like?

I love genuine guys; that's why I pretty much stay away from celebrities. I don't care about money, because, trust me, I can support myself. What I love is a protective bear. The one place I don't need to be in control is the bedroom; I like for a man to take control there. Sometimes being sexual with my partner is a great way to blow off steam at the end of a hard day's work. I'm not the girl who's going to be too tired.

What gets you excited?

Foreplay is really important, even if it's just a tender kiss on the neck. It's important to remember to do the little things that lead up to getting in the mood. The best date for me would be if I came home from work and was greeted with a homemade—no, not takeout—grilled cheese sandwich and a glass of wine. You set that up with a little tablecloth and some flowers and light one candle. The simpler, the sexier. And if that doesn't fly for the girl you're with, then I'm not sure she's worth your time.

Finally, we need to ask: Who was cooler back in the Mickey Mouse Club days, Ryan Gosling or Justin Timberlake?

They were both very charismatic, but I think I have to shy away from the question. I don't want this to bite me in the butt later. They were tight, you know. They'd walk around together all the time, same as me and Britney would. Now look at us. It's funny how that played out. 🐭

THE WALKING DEAD'S ZOMBIE ASS-KICKER

DROP

LAUREN COHAN

DEAD

HAS THE BODY AND THE BRA-A-A-A-A-INS!

GORG

BY CAMERON BERKMAN

EOUS

PHOTOGRAPHS BY HARPER SMITH

On AMC's postapocalyptic romp The Walking Dead, Lauren Cohan plays Maggie Greene, a fetching farmer's daughter with a penchant for spilling zombie brains when it's called for (and it's pretty much always called for). In the flesh Lauren trades her Southern twang for an English accent but doesn't sacrifice any of the ass-kicking intensity and fiery good looks that made us fall for her at first glance. Or first impalement, really. And that's why it's the end of the world as we know it, and we feel fine.

What's your favorite walker slaying?

Yeah, probably the machete under the guy's chin on the riot-gear walker, at the beginning of Season 2—I like that one. I get to deal with hordes of walkers this season. It's been all about speed and accuracy, and that's really been my favorite. You just use any implement you can find, and you become so quick and ruthless. That's a lot of fun.

Are you better equipped than most to handle the zombie apocalypse?

Than most people in the world? Yes, definitely. I mean, I don't know if it will be death by zombie in the end, but if it is I think I could probably do it.

How much about the show's future do the writers let you in on beforehand?

The reins have definitely become much tighter as we've progressed through the show. I remember in the second season getting four or five scripts when I first started. But I don't work that way, because you get too wrapped up in where you're headed, and it's hard to be where you are. So the way we have it now is I have a very loose idea of my character's arc for the season. When we get scripts—

Steven Yeun and I—whoever finishes the script first calls the other and goes, "Can you believe that happens in the end?!" and the other goes, "Ah, fuck you!" So we have spoilers within the cast as well.

How easy is it for you to go from your natural English accent to the Southern accent you use for your character, Maggie? And are people ever surprised by it?

I almost want to stay in an American accent all the time. I'm originally American, so it's not actually that difficult. When people find out I grew up in England, I feel like I have to give a huge explanation. As soon as I'm on set, I'm very serious, and it's very easy to go back into Maggie.

In what ways do you feel you're similar to Maggie?

Maggie is very optimistic and active. I'm very sporty myself. I like horses. I'd like to think I'm pretty grounded, and I think Maggie is a pretty honest laborer as well. She's grown up in this house working on this farm. I definitely envy a lot of Maggie's life—it's really cool. Maybe if I had grown up on a farm I wouldn't feel that way.

What special skill do you have that nobody knows about?

Swimming! I was a competitive swimmer from age six to about 17. Swimming and singing, I guess. They're not really apocalypse skills, but that's OK.

Do you have a celebrity crush?

Jeff Bridges. It's not a romantic crush; it's just kind of an everything crush. I love him as an actor, I love his voice, I love his smile. OK, now it sounds romantic—but it's not!

What is your biggest turn-on?

Respectfulness—someone who's strong and confident enough in himself to treat you well. I think that comes from a guy who respects himself, too. I mean, when you meet somebody, you want to think about who they are and how they would raise a kid, I guess. Like Jeff Bridges! [laughs]

What is the worst pickup line?

It's somebody not being personal. The worst pickup line is any pickup line, I think.

What gets you in the mood quickly?

Oh, my God. It's Maxim; it's OK. I'm impulsive—let's just leave it at that. ♡

The only thing
we like better than watching fat dudes
bouncing off big balls on Wipeout is the lovely
JILL WAGNER.

What's your favorite part about hosting a show as crazy as Wipeout?

I'm a people person, and we have folks from all walks of life competing. They just amuse me. We should have a separate behind-the-scenes show, because that would be really interesting.

"Interesting" as in creepy?

Ha, yeah! I mean, I have guys covered in mud picking me up—which I don't mind, but my wardrobe lady hates it. I've gotten some marriage proposals, too, but have yet to see an actual ring.

We're sure that special contestant will come along one day.

I've dated such a rainbow of people that it's possible. Mostly I love when guys are charming. I was reminded of that during a goodwill trip to Afghanistan—how attractive it is when guys have manners.

Tell us more about the trip.

Well, the night we got to Bagram, two rockets hit the base, 200 feet from where I was sleeping. The scariest part is, I didn't even wake up! Still, I was so honored to go there and let the soldiers know we remember them and appreciate all they're doing for us.

Do you still get recognized from doing Mercury car ads?

This is how it usually goes: A young, hot guy will come up and say, "Oh, you're the Mercury girl!" And I think, Yay, this is gonna get me somewhere. Then he goes, "My dad is in love with you!" I'm the dad crush. Maybe I should've been in a Carl's Jr. commercial!

Do you watch a lot of TV?

I'm more into the outdoors. I love the shooting range, and I took archery lessons until my teacher—a 70-year-old man—hit on me.

He must be a Mercury fan! Last question, and people must ask you this all the time, but...

Have I ever run the Wipeout course? That's always the number one question, and the answer is nope! But I am totally game to do it if John Henson does, and I'm sure once he reads this he will. 🐼

Finally, every meaningful barroom debate will be answered once and for all. Where's our trophy?

THE NEED FOR SPEED

The Miz on...

WHICH ATHLETES WOULD MAKE THE ULTIMATE WWE STARS

"To be a great wrestler, you need three attributes: charisma, athleticism, and a high threshold for pain. This isn't like the NFL, where you bruise your ribs and sit out a week. Clay Matthews, though, has the ultimate charisma. The dude has power, he has a great look—ladies love him—and he even has a dance! Rob Gronkowski would be another good one: The dude's a beast. James Laurinaitis comes from the WWE family—his dad was Animal from Legion of Doom—so he knows what it takes. And Adrian Peterson, when he gets injured, he comes right back and lights it up. I think the best QB would be Tim Tebow, who could be either the ultimate good guy or the ultimate bad guy. Dwight Howard's a dude who has a great physique and some charisma, but he seems soft, like he'd take the easy way out. But the guy I'd really like to see in the ring is LeBron James, especially for what he did to Cleveland. I still haven't forgiven him. But he's a workhorse, he's talented, he has charisma, and he has hate-ability. He could be the ultimate heel!"

QUIT YOUR DAY JOBS!

Six athletes who'd maybe, possibly, be better at other sports.

1 KEVIN DURANT

Soccer goalie

Most elite goalkeepers are 6'2" to 6'4", so just imagine how much real estate the OKC "small" forward could cover with his pterodactyl-like, 7'5" wingspan and catlike reflexes (and don't get us started on his puppy-dog eyes!).

2 JASON PIERRE-PAUL

Gymnast

Sure, when most of us think of gymnasts, we picture tiny little sprites in leotards, not 6'5", 280-pound beasts. But then, most guys that size can't do 23 back flips in a row like JPP. Balance beam, now would be a good time to start shaking in fear.

3 COLIN KAEPERNICK

Pitcher

Throwing out the ceremonial first pitch at a San Francisco Giants game this summer, the 49ers QB hit 87 on the radar gun, rather than throwing it 10 feet wide and 20 feet short, like most (Babba Booe, we're looking at you).

4 LEBRON JAMES

Quarterback or tight end or...any position, really

At 6'9", 270, with 40-inch ups and a 4.6 40, the former all-state receiver would be a freakish tight end. Or a QB, which he played as a freshman. At worst he'd make the tallest water boy in NFL history.

5 ANDY MURRAY

Hockey goalie

Blessed with quick-twitch reflexes, any of the top tennis players could excel between the pipes. But we'll take Murray, mostly because he's from Scotland, meaning he'd have a kick-ass Braveheart-style goalie mask.

6 USAIN BOLT

Wide receiver

The world's fastest man would absolutely blow by defensive backs in the NFL, and at 6'5" he has the stretch to haul in passes over lesser humans' heads. He'll be in the end zone faster than Mark Sanchez will be in a line-man's butt.

THE UNUSUAL SUSPECTS

Tall, short, fat, thin, completely effing freakish: The world of athletics is filled with physical anomalies. Here are some of the anomalier.

Artie Lange on...

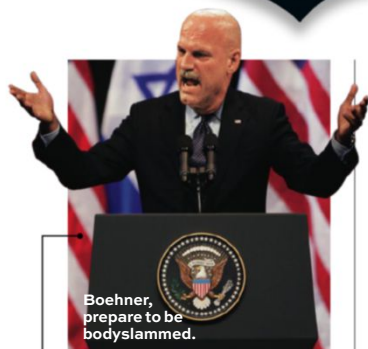

THE FUNNIEST DUDES IN SPORTS

"The key to anything funny is honesty, which is why Charles Barkley is one of the funniest guys in sports... As for current athletes, I hear Blake Griffin is funny enough to do stand-up comedy. Peyton Manning is really funny. But the funniest guy in sports, probably the history of sports, is Bob Uecker. He invited Norm Macdonald and me to the Brewers broadcast booth, and they have a "cough button" that you press if you have to cough on the air. He was like a jazz musician with it. While on the air, he'd hit the cough button to say something filthy about a hot chick he saw in the audience, then go right back into the play. It was astonishing—he was our hero!"

HOW ATHLETES FROM THE PAST WOULD DO TODAY

"When analyzing athletes from the past versus today's athletes, we have to ask ourselves how they would perform if they had access to modern medicine, training, and equipment. Someone like Bo Jackson would be outstanding in whatever era you put him in. Jim Brown is the same. And if Mickey Mantle had modern medical treatment when he tore his knee up, who knows how great he would have been. Bill Russell would absolutely thrive today because of his smarts and athleticism, but because of his size he'd probably be a power forward rather than a center. Then there are rule changes. What would Rick Barry have been able to do with the three-point line? Or look at Babe Ruth: In this day and age, he never would have transitioned from pitcher to hitter, because he was one of the best pitchers in that game, and that's too valuable an asset to mess with. Finally, there's boxing. At 5'11" and 180 pounds, would Rocky Marciano even fight as a heavyweight today? He'd have to gain 20 pounds just to qualify!"

ARSENIO HALL MOVES BACK INTO

LATE NIGHT

AFTER ALMOST 20 YEARS OUT OF THE SPOTLIGHT, THE TALK SHOW LEGEND IS GEARING UP TO RECLAIM THE LATE-NIGHT THRONE. BEST GET YOUR "WOOFING" ARM READY.

BY PATRICK CARONE PHOTOGRAPHS BY RAMONA ROSALES

M

McDowell's is about to be demolished, and Arsenio Hall doesn't care. Yes, the Wendy's at 85-07 Queens Boulevard—which stood in for the fictional fast-food joint where Eddie Murphy as an African prince and Arsenio as his loyal sidekick worked in the blockbuster 1988 comedy Coming to America—is making way for a $105 million luxury apartment complex. And even though comedian Louie Anderson, who played a fellow McDowell's employee, implored the once and future late-night host to help save the cinematic landmark, Arsenio simply wasn't interested. "I don't got time to save McDowell's," he says. "I gotta save my own ass!"

IT'S TWO AND A HALF MONTHS

before the premiere of Arsenio's new talk show, and it's obvious the comedian turned actor turned late-night icon turned reality star is attempting, with all his might, to do just that. We're across the street from the Hollywood studio where The Arsenio Hall Show will be taped, sitting in a bare-bones office the size of, well, any old office. "There was another magazine here the other day," he confides, "and I overheard them whispering, 'I can't believe his office is so small.' But, see, I've been down this road before, and I learned a whole lot." He flashes his signature smile. "It's all about the show, man, no bullshit. It's all about the show."

When Arsenio, who is now a shockingly youthful 57 (seriously, what kind of moisturizer does he use?), says he's "been down this road before," he's not lying. The original Arsenio Hall Show premiered on January 3, 1989 and ran until May 27, 1994. It was the first late-night talk show to legitimately compete with Johnny Carson's Tonight Show—just ask also-rans like Pat Sajak, Joan Rivers, and Alan Thicke—mostly because Arsenio wasn't trying to be like Johnny. Instead of guests like Tiny

Tim and Liberace, he featured people like Tupac and the Wu-Tang Clan. Instead of sitting behind a big desk, he chatted with folks from a regular old chair. And most memorably, instead of an audience that clapped politely, he had the "Dog Pound," a special section of the crowd that would stand up and howl, "Woof, woof, woof!" while busting out fist pumps that'd put the cast of Jersey Shore to shame. It was a talk show for a new generation. "My success became a study in demographics," he tells me. "Kids didn't want to go out to the party until after the show was over."

AS ARSENIO NAVIGATES THE

studio—high-fiving interns, interrupting production meetings—it's clear he brings the party wherever he goes. Considering his roots as a stand-up comic, his desire to keep everyone laughing makes sense. The Cleveland native moved to L.A. in the late '70s looking to hit the big time. His stories from the era are epic, like the time in '81 when he was opening for Bob Saget in Tempe, Arizona, and the club owner offered them a pile of blow instead of actual, you know, money. "I couldn't take cocaine out of Arizona, and I wouldn't know what to do with it at LAX anyway," he laughs. "I've seen the movies!"

He eventually scored roles in features like Amazon Women on the Moon, Harlem Nights, and, of course, Coming to America. After getting, then losing, his talk show—blame the one-two-three punch of Letterman moving to CBS, the rise of cable, and an appearance by controversial Nation of Islam leader Louis Farrakhan—Arsenio pretty much lay low. His pal and Harlem Nights/Coming to America costar Eddie Murphy tells us, "I told him he should do another talk show a few months after he left in '94," but instead Arsenio tried starring in a sitcom, then hosting Star Search. Both proved unsuccessful.

So why does Arsenio, who loves nothing more than spending time with his 13-year-old son, want to get back into the game now, in a late-night environment that's more cutthroat and competitive than ever? You can credit, or blame, fellow comic George Lopez and the one-and-only Donald Trump.

George Lopez, who got his big break doing stand-up on the original show, has remained best buds with Arsenio. And a few years back, when Lopez had his own late-night show on TBS, Arsenio would often swing by the studio to hang out before the two headed to a Lakers game. One day, when Snoop Dogg was a guest, Lopez told Arsenio that the first time he'd seen the rapper was on his show. "George said I should bring him out," Arsenio recalls. "I was like, 'No, no, you see the way I'm dressed.' He says, 'Do it, man. I've got a suit!'" Arsenio wound up listening to his friend, doing the intro for Snoop...and falling in love with the feeling.

"Something happened that night," he says. "There was just something the audience gave me, and I knew that I was going to do this motherfucking show again, even if I had to do it in my yard." As for Lopez, whose own show went to that big TV network in the sky a couple of years ago, he couldn't be happier that his friend is returning to the airwaves: "I'm thrilled. For the first time in two years, I can't wait for it to get dark!"

Still feeling the buzz from performing in front of a camera, and wanting to get some national TV exposure, Arsenio accepted Donald Trump's invitation to appear on Celebrity Apprentice in 2012. Through a combination of humility, intelligence, and his sense of humor, he won the competition, beating out Clay Aiken, Penn Jillette, Debbie Gibson, and a host of other semifamous names. Not only did he win money for his charity, the Magic Johnson Foundation, but Arsenio also was able to get his name and face into living rooms across the country. Audiences too young to know what an "Arsenio" was finally got to meet the gregarious and hilarious "kid from Cleveland."

WHICH BRINGS US TO TODAY, and the new Arsenio Hall Show, premiering September 9. When the original began in 1989, people computed with an Apple IIe, not an iPad. Conservative George H. W. Bush was president, not hip-hop-loving Hawaiian Barack Obama. Mark Zuckerberg was in kindergarten, tweets were bird noises, and perhaps most worrisome

"I KNEW THAT I WAS GOING TO DO
THIS MOTHERFUCKING SHOW AGAIN,
EVEN IF I HAD TO DO IT IN MY YARD."

The only thing
sharper than his wit? His hairline.

Tearing the roof off the place...by performing on the roof of the place.

for someone intending to launch a late-night talk show, he was up against just one fellow named Johnny, not a gaggle of guys named Conan, Jon, Stephen, Dave, Jay, Craig, Jimmy, and...Jimmy. "There were no cell phones when I started. I'm coming back to a whole other era," he tells me over cheeseburgers in New York City. (We met up again on the East Coast, where he was glad-handing local affiliates who will be putting his syndicated show on the air.) He continues to put things in perspective: "I broke Billy Ray Cyrus and 'Achy Breaky Heart,' and now Miley Cyrus is out there smoking weed!" So how does he plan to get with the times, exactly?

For starters, how about a Tweet Seat instead of a Dog Pound. "It's not the Arsenio Hall Twitter account," he explains. "It's a seat with a little bird on it that, every night, a fan can sit in during the show and tweet from. It will be a Twitter ghost on that stage that will manifest itself in different ways." Hmmm. And what does that mean, Arsenio? "Say, for example, the studio audience just saw Ne-Yo open the show. The person in the Tweet Seat can tell people to check it out tonight. During rehearsals, maybe Mary J. Blige or Adam Levine will do their thing. Who knows, maybe the janitor will send a message!"

WISELY, IT SEEMS ARSENIO IS

intent on keeping up, digitally, with the Jimmys. "The guys younger than me, that's their world. The guys older than me, like Jay Leno, might not see concrete evidence of online popularity translating to hard numbers, so they're not so into it." Fallon, whose show embraced social media since before it even premiered, is clearly an inspiration. "It's his lifeblood! Fallon is part of this futuristic world. It's not just about numbers anymore; otherwise NBC is firing their number one guy," he says, referring to the decision to replace ratings king Leno with Fallon as Tonight Show host this coming February.

Something else Arsenio is aware of is the demise of "appointment TV." Watching a show at a specific time, rather than off the DVR or on the Internet, is a dying concept. "Kids want it when they want it. They're like, 'I can watch it tomorrow on Hulu.'" What's his plan to get people to tune in to an actual TV set? "I'll be a little more loose and spontaneous than the other guys. We got to make a person think, Why do I have to watch tonight? And part of what I used to do, that I want to do again, is things no one can predict."

I try to get some of those "things no one can predict" out of him, but nearly four decades in the entertainment biz gives a man a hell of a poker face. Is he looking for moments like the most famous one from his old show, then presidential candidate Bill Clinton jamming on sax? "I put the bar high with that, yeah. He actually tells me he became president because of what I did! But now we've seen presidents dance, we've seen them play bass, we've seen them slow-jam the news. I mean, you'd almost have to get a political figure to show you his Ray J video."

Here's an idea, Arsenio: Why not get another likely presidential candidate who also happens to be named Clinton to perform on your new show? "You know what," he says, smiling. "I sure hope Hillary plays the harmonica or somethin'." ■

Flicking the Coffee Bean

In November 2012, a Florida woman, apparently high on crack cocaine, was craving overpriced coffee and a really awkward orgasm, so she walked into a Starbucks and started masturbating. Cops say they witnessed Jennifer Piranian, 29, putting her “hands into her pants” while “wiggling out.” But horny ol’ Jen had an explanation: She was just hanging out at Starbucks, waiting to go to the hospital because she had some kind of spider bite (apparently on her clitoris). They arrested her after searching her bag and finding a crack pipe with cocaine residue. Odd, since most people who get off in Starbucks are just buzzed on caramel macchiatos.

Just the Tip

When police were called to an apartment complex near the University of Florida campus in April, they found God, and, boy, was he fucked up. Michael Silecchia told cops he was the Lord Almighty after removing all his clothes and saying, “Don’t cut my penis off,” then quickly changing his mind and saying, “Cut my penis off.” If it wasn’t completely obvious, he also told them he had taken a hit of LSD, then drove home that point by allegedly punching a cop in the head. Officers attempted to subdue the 19-year-old student by zapping him six times with a Taser, thus breaking the 11th commandment, “Thou shalt not tase God, bro.”

Death by Chocolate

Michigan police officer Edward Sanchez took a bite out of crime—literally—when he and his wife ate pot brownies they baked using confiscated marijuana in April 2006. We know this because he called 911 to report that they were “having an overdose” on them. “We made brownies, and I think we’re dead,” Sanchez told the operator. “Time is going by really, really, really, really slow.” EMS took the couple to the hospital, where they were released the next morning with a raging case of shame. The incident forced the 28-year-old officer to resign from his position, which unfortunately means he needs a new weed hookup.

You Blow

Graphic Art

Some art “speaks” to people. And if you’re high on bath salts, it may tell you to use it as a toilet. Such was the case for Carmen Tisch, 36, who snorted bath salts and spent the afternoon at a Denver museum in December 2011. A security camera caught Tisch punching and scratching a $30 million painting by abstract expressionist Clyfford Still, and then, as her pièce de résistance, she pulled down her pants and rubbed her ass against it while peeing. The painting suffered $10,000 in damages but was restored to its original condition. Which is to say, it still looks like something our five-year-old nephew made with finger paints.

Huff It Out

James Crittenden was sleepy one afternoon last July, so he went to the ValuMarket in Louisville, Kentucky, bypassed the coffee section, and, police say, sat down in an aisle to huff 10 cans of whipped cream. When cops arrived, he offered to pay for the whipped cream, which totaled $26.90, but had only $7 in his pocket. He then told them through slurred speech that he was just trying to “wake up” and that “the U.S. Constitution allowed [him] the authority to huff Reddi-wip.” Police arrested the 36-year-old huffer despite that fact that, like our Founding Fathers, he was just fighting for our right to party.

Crude Awakening

In July 2012, Florida teenager Steve Tilbury fell asleep after chomping down some magic mushrooms. When he woke up, he was still tripping balls and thought he was having a nightmare. So in order to “wake up,” the 17-year-old grabbed his parents’ .22-caliber rifle and shot himself in the forehead. That did the job, but it also made a terrible mess, and Tilbury spent the remainder of his high cleaning up blood before running outside and asking a stranger to take him to the hospital. Doctors were able to remove the bullet and save his life, but tragically, his buzz was killed in the incident.

Once Bitten, Twice High

On a Massachusetts campsite in August 2012, lovebirds Amanda Norcia and Brendon Gibson got together to drop acid, then trou. It was pretty romantic until Gibson, 24, allegedly took a bite out of his par-amour’s cheek and then ran off into the woods. Norcia, 20, called the cops, who found her flesh-eating boyfriend in the woods, naked and covered in feces. He was tasered twice, pepper-sprayed, and arrested. Worst of all, he didn’t even get to cuddle afterward.

If the SAG Awards don't make you wanna barf, maybe this will.

Feast your eyes on the 30 scariest, freakiest, most effed-up flicks ever made, then run to your Netflix account and press PLAY. (Spoiler alert: Get ready for zombies, rolling heads, and deeply unsettling uses of household items.)

SCARIEST BUMP
IN THE NIGHT

High Tension (2003)

After watching Alexandre Aja's horror debut, you'll be hoping that 2 A.M. thud wasn't the sound of your dad's head hitting the floor. Aja's gruesome decapitation scene may just be the most startling separation orchestrated by a Frenchman since Tony Parker's split with Eva Longoria.

2 SCARIEST TAKE ON THE HOUSING MARKET

Dream Home (2010)

In this gleefully gory Hong Kong slasher that satirizes the property bubble, a woman obsessed with owning the perfect condo drives the price down by butchering others in the building. If you think real estate sounds boring, don't worry: Two audience members vomited at the premiere.

3

SCARIEST DINNER SINCE MEETING
YOUR GIRLFRIEND'S PARENTS

The Texas Chainsaw Massacre (1974)

When Sally is forced to sit down for supper with a dysfunctional cannibal family that's just murdered her friends, the poor girl can't make a dent in her plate of (human) sausages. Apologies to Jessica Biel's overflowing tank top in the remake—the original wins.

Has great taste
in women.

SCARIEST USE OF
A RUSTY STAPLER

The Human Centipede 2: Full Sequence (2011)

A mute security guard who's obsessed with the original Human Centipede uses a staple gun, knives, crowbars, and duct tape to join his 12 hostages' asses to each other's mouths, creating one disgustingly long digestive tract. Hope no one had Indian for dinner.

6

SCARIEST MIRROR DANCE

The Silence of the Lambs (1991)

Perhaps horror film's all-time creepiest shimmy happens when girl-suit-loving serial killer Buffalo Bill opens his robe to show off nipple rings and a carefully tucked mangina while writhing to Q Lazzarus' "Goodbye Horses." And you thought your "home alone" dance to Miley Cyrus' "We Can't Stop" was freaky!

Could you pass the Noxzema pads?

7

SCARIEST TWO SECONDS EVER

Mulholland Dr. (2001)

This isn't even technically a horror movie, but you'll still shit your pants when you see what's behind the diner's trash bins.

"I'm just going to take a bit off the top," said the world's worst hairdresser.

SCARIEST ELIJAH WOOD PERFORMANCE

Maniac (2013)

Sure, his hobbit feet were kind of unsettling, and he was a complete creep in Sin City, but his role in this horror remake will have you clinging to your scalp.

9

SCARIEST MIND-BENDER

Triangle (2009)

Without giving too much away, it's set on a boat, people die, and there are at least five versions of the gorgeous Melissa George running around at any given time. As Gene Shalit might say, "Don't try to see Triangle; just see it!"

10

SCARIEST USE OF A BEAUTY AID

Sleepaway Camp (1983)

This schlocky '80s cut-'em-up has a pedophile cook being scalded to death, a swarm of bees in the boys' bathroom, and a girl getting impaled "down there" with a red-hot curling iron—just a few deadly camp hijinks. Hello, Muddah, hello, Fadduh: A mystery killer just hacked up your daughter!

SCARIEST LADY-PARTS

Teeth (2007)

Fifteen years after Sharon Stone's sexy Basic Instinct scene, something so disturbing came along that we now flinch every time a pair of legs are uncrossed on-screen.

HORROR'S CREEPIEST KIDS WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Many of the genre's young stars have grown up to be like you: boring.

LINDA BLAIR

Regan in The Exorcist

After landing an Oscar nod for her role as the foul-mouthed, demon-possessed girl in this 1973 hit, Linda landed in some real-life trouble for cocaine possession. These days she runs a dog shelter.

DANNY LLOYD

Danny in The Shining

The six-year-old didn't even realize he was shooting a horror movie. He "retired" from movies in 1982 and is now a biology professor. He and Tony haven't spoken in years.

HARVEY STEPHENS

Damien Thorn in The Omen

Nearly 40 years after playing the spawn of Satan, Harvey—who became a property developer in England—still can't live down his role: "I know every joke there is about 666."

JOHN FRANKLIN

Isaac in Children of the Corn

At 24 he could play a child preacher due to a growth defect. Later he played Cousin Itt in The Addams Family. Finally he gave up acting to be a very short English teacher.

KYRA SCHON

Karen in

Night of the Living Dead

Karen remains one of cinema's most iconic zombies, but these days Kyra's more interested in designing jewelry than chomping on her parents.

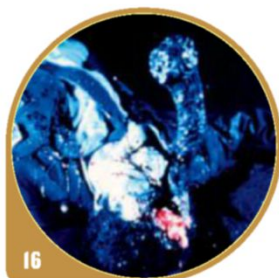

"Well, there's your problem," noted the plumber. "You have a demon in your furnace!"

I'm no sexist. There's room in this game for girls. I was married myself for a while, and me and the wife definitely raised our share of hell together. But who's afraid of some suburban chick named Katie? "Oh, God, please don't hurt me, Katie"... "Get away with that eyelash curler, Katie"... "Katie, get off me, I can't breathe." Only thing scary about her is her ass.

Look, I've perpetrated some repulsive shit in my day. Stabbings, decapitations, electrocutions. Once I even got Jennifer Tilly pregnant. But even I have standards. And if you ask me, sewing a bunch of hapless kids ass-to-mouth is about the lamest thing a killer could do in a movie. Why go to all that trouble when nobody's gonna want to watch?

DEXTER

What kind of self-respecting serial killer follows a "moral code"—written by a cop, no less—and preys only on his own kind? This asshole is a complete abomination, an outrage against nature. And they call me a monster. His sister's hot, though.

For years fans have been clamoring for a team-up or a grudge match, stupidly assuming we move in the same circles just because we're both "of a certain stature." First of all, I'd hope that as a culture we've moved beyond that ignorant stereotyping. Secondly, he comes up to my chin. And third, he's afraid of fucking four-leaf clovers! And compulsively talks in rhyme! This pipsqueak isn't fit to shine my Keds.

Ron Howard

The only former child star who never robbed a 7-Eleven gets racy with his latest flick. By Patrick Carone

Your new movie, Rush, is the story of the real-life rivalry between two Formula 1 drivers in the '70s. Why do a true story?

The first movie I did that was inspired by true events was Apollo 13. We had a preview screening, and the audience comment cards were great. I was very excited. But suddenly I came to one that marked it "poor." In big giant letters the guy wrote, "More Hollywood bullshit. They would never survive!" I realized then that's the beauty of a true story.

Besides incredible race sequences, this movie also features some very hot women, like Olivia Wilde and Alexandra Maria Lara.

My partner, Brian Grazer, is always teasing me that I'm very character-driven, reality-based, and into celebrations of human cooperation...but not so sexy. When he started seeing the dailies from Rush, though, he called and said, "I'm proud of you. These girls are hot!" A lot of people around F1—the guys from that era—like to say that was when "sex was safe and driving was dangerous."

Were there scary moments on set?

On the last day of filming, we had two unplanned spinouts. One of them was just close enough to extras and camera-people that when we wrapped at the end of the day, I was really, really glad.

Are you a big racing buff?

The embarrassing admission is that I'm not really a car guy. I'm a drama and world-creation guy. But I really came to appreciate the sport. I get it. It's very cutting-edge and modern the way it combines technology with athleticism.

Do you have anything fun in your garage, or do you drive a Prius?

I had a Prius! The most fun thing I have is my first car, a 1970 Volkswagen Beetle. It's the car I courted my wife in, so every once in a while we go out and neck in it. It's pretty tough.

You've directed more classic films than we can name, from Splash, Cocoon, Willow, and Ransom to A Beautiful Mind, Cinderella Man, The Da Vinci Code, and Frost/Nixon. Do you know when a movie is going to be a hit?

No, I don't. You never can be certain—that's the lesson I've learned. It's a medium that can't be mastered. I just try to find something compelling, something I want to throw myself into.

You and your frequent collaborator Tom Hanks are known as the nicest guys in Hollywood. If you two had a "nice-off," who would win?

The reality is, I don't think either of us is inordinately nice. I think we're both kind of reasonable guys, and in our particular business, that gets us to be thought of as nice.

Do you have an evil secret you keep hidden? Do you torture puppies?

Nothing that concrete. Only evil secrets of the mind, as Jimmy Carter once said.

But you can probably find a few people I've fired over the years who would have something else to say on the subject.

You acted on TV and in movies for many years before directing. Do you ever read a script and say, "I want to do this character"?

No, I only read scripts with an eye toward directing them. That said, I'd like to act again. I think it would be interesting. I felt rusty doing my little Arrested Development turn, so I was glad Jason Bateman was there. He also has the "nice" gene.

You made an incredible transition from child actor to successful director, while so many people—from the cast of Diff'rent Strokes to Amanda Bynes—have a very hard time. How were you able to do it?

I think child stars have a leg up, actually, because they have an innate sense of what creative problem solving is all about. But to make a life out of it, you have to be ready to take on project after project. You have to like the action.

Is it true that your kids' middle names come from the locations where they were conceived?

David Letterman got that out of me, and my kids will never let me forget it. My daughter, Bryce, was conceived in Dallas, and our twins were conceived while we were doing a publicity tour at the Carlyle Hotel in New York City. For the last one, we were on Lower Cross Road, so we decided to go with Cross. "Volvo" wouldn't be such a good middle name. ■

AMERICAN MONSTER

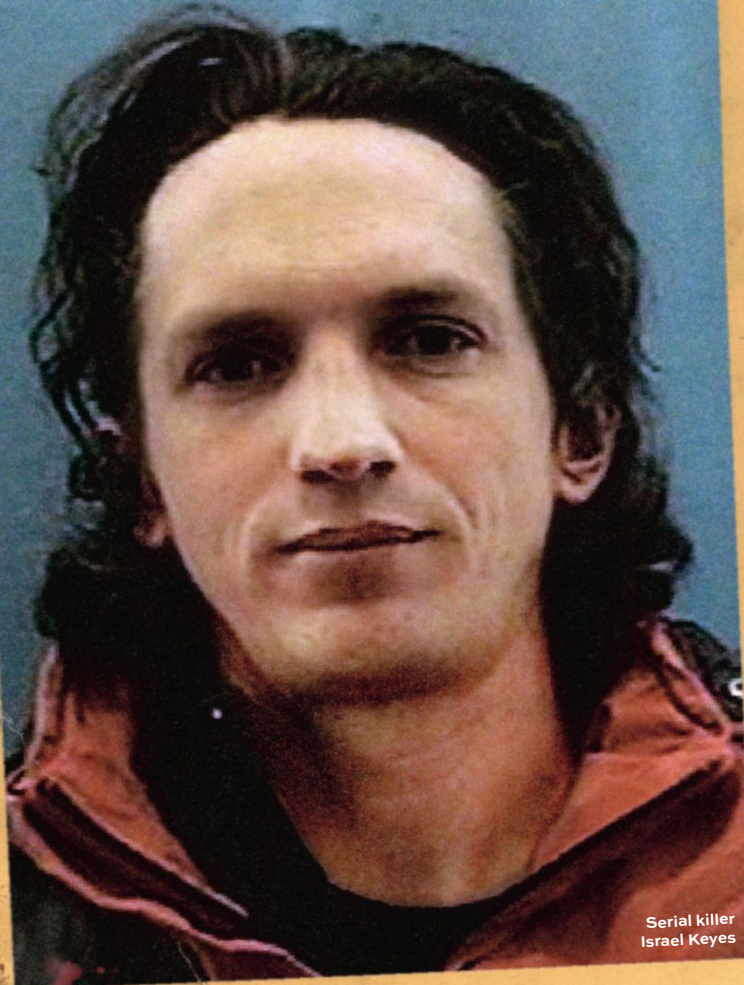

The Hunt for Serial Killer Israel Keyes

When 18-year-old Samantha Koenig disappeared from this coffee shop in Alaska, authorities knew they had a serious crime on their hands. What they didn't know was that they were after the most notorious serial killer in a generation.

Serial killer
Israel Keyes

He was the same dirty rat he'd always been. He got what he had coming. Sorry to burst everyone's bubble, but you'll never find him."

Sitting with her laptop at a Starbucks in Anchorage, Alaska, Peggy Giles reads the ominous message on her Facebook page. "Whoever wrote it was probably drunk," she says. Giles, a heavysset, middle-aged mom in glasses, wears a loud blue T-shirt and has long, frizzy hair. "You know what they say," she laughs. "Friends don't let friends Facebook drunk!"

But the guy online isn't just spouting off. He's angry at Giles for investigating the disappearance of Shanon Lovell, a young man from nearby Wasilla who has been missing for nine months. With a few taps on her keyboard, Giles passes along this guy's threatening message to the cops. "Whatever makes the hair on my neck stand up," she says, "I forward on to the police." Here in Alaska, Giles is known as the Ice Cream Lady of Valdez, famous for selling Fudgsicles from a pink mail truck. But online she leads a stealthy second life: hunting for killers and their victims, like Lovell.

Giles is a cybersleuth, an amateur snoop who harnesses the power of the Net to crack cold cases. It marks a new twist in the modern age of tracking down bad guys: Ordinary people with a laptop and the will can play digital detective—and occasionally piss off the professional investigators along the way. Sites such as Websleuths, the Doe Network, and Perverted Justice are hubs for DIY dicks and have led to numerous arrests. A group of amateur sleuths on Reddit (the Reddit Bureau of Investigation) has investigated the Boston Marathon bombers as well as missing-persons cases.

Now, with the help of James Koenig, a long-haired biker in a Harley-Davidson shirt sitting with us at Starbucks, Giles is trying to find victims of America's most notorious serial killer in decades, Israel Keyes, an Alaskan who is thought to have killed at least 11 people around the country—including Koenig's own daughter, Samantha. It's the case that started these cybersleuths on their way and the one that haunts them to this day.

"I don't want other families to have to go through this," Koenig says, lowering his eyes. "There's no manual on what you do when your child is missing or your family member is missing. I had to learn that the hard way."

IT WAS ONLY Detective Monique Doll's second day on the Anchorage Police Department's homicide squad when the first call came in. On February 2, 2012, at 12:30 P.M., a patrol officer phoned to say an 18-year-old barista, Samantha Koenig, was missing. James Koenig had called in to say his daughter never came home the night before from her job at Common Grounds Espresso, one of the many ramshackle coffee kiosks around town.

The patrol officer had been asking questions in the area, but with no signs of a break-in, no struggle, and no blood, he told Doll, something just didn't feel right. "The more time you have on this job, the more comfortable you become listening to your gut instinct," Doll tells me one afternoon as we sit in a conference room at the police department. "That's what kept our ancestors from being eaten by dinosaurs."

Doll is a tough, tall young blonde with razor-sharp instincts. A third-generation cop raised in Upper Michigan, she spent a decade with the DEA busting smack dealers and meth-heads. "I like solving the puzzle, solving the mystery," she says. "That's why investigations called to me."

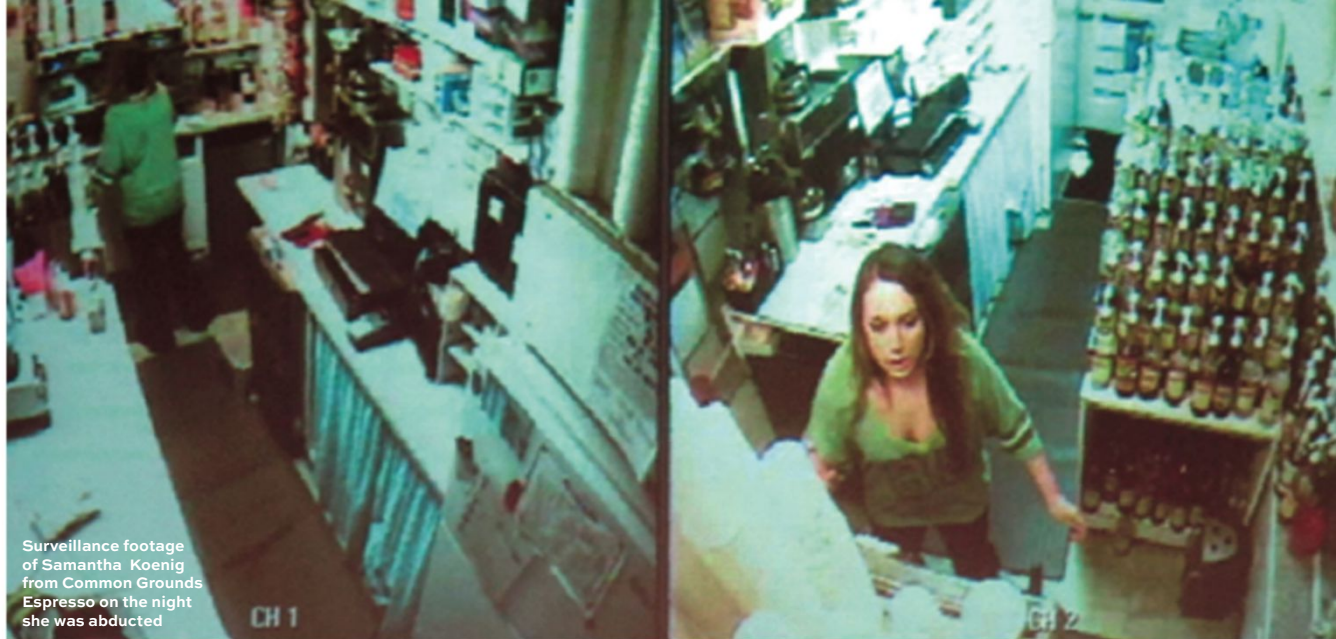

When she saw the surveillance video of a masked man jumping through the window of Common Grounds and leading Samantha away, she knew this was serious. "It was like being punched in the gut," she recalls. "We had to get all hands on deck and do everything we could to find this girl."

From the get-go the case couldn't have been stranger. Doll noticed that the kidnapper was holding a cup of coffee when he jumped through the window, and he had Samantha make him an Americano before they left. He'd also chosen a surprisingly conspicuous location: The coffee kiosk was outside a popular gym on a busy road. "It was so unusual," she recalls. "Everything we touched with this case broke weird."

For James Koenig the mystery wasn't just weird—it was a nightmare. He was a single father who scraped by as a trucker; his daughter had seen hard times but was getting her life back on track. She was earning money with the hope of joining the service or becoming a veterinarian. Koenig feared the worst when, the night Samantha went missing, her boyfriend received a text from her phone saying she was angry at her father and staying at a friend's. "It wasn't like her," Koenig says. "She would have called me directly."

While Doll and her team canvassed the area, Koenig took the search into his own hands, staking out the coffee kiosk and rallying his friends around town. "I'm not just going to sit on my couch and let the cops do their job," he tells me. "I'm going to be out there making sure they're doing it, and I'm going to be doing everything I possibly can."

He wasn't the only one. Up in Valdez, Peggy Giles had also heard about the case, and, with daughters of her own, her heart went out to Koenig. When a mutual friend told her Koenig wanted help getting the word out about Samantha online, Giles jumped in.

Together Giles and Koenig launched a Facebook page, "Please Help Find Samantha Koenig," which was quickly flooded with leads from around town. For Doll the cybersleuths' efforts were "incredibly important," but a mixed bag. On one hand, they turned up thousands of leads, but every lead had to be investigated—whether worthwhile or not. "That wastes a lot of resources," says Doll. Half the leads were from online psychics. "It's like, 'I see Samantha, and she's in a cold, dark place,'" Doll recalls, scoffing. "Well, we're talking about Alaska in February, so it's like, thank you, Captain Obvious, appreciate that, we'll get right on it!"

But the more Giles and Koenig took to the Net, the more the case became a local cause. As the community rallied around the cybersleuths, Koenig raised $70,000 in reward money. He also fired off a message on Facebook to his daughter's kidnapper, in case he was reading. "I have resources, good and bad," he typed. "I do not want to unleash the bad, I do not wish ill will against you and yours, but if this does not end soon, you leave me no choice.”

On February 24, three weeks after Samantha went missing, Koenig got another text from her phone—but this time it was a ransom note. The note was a kind of scavenger hunt, telling Koenig to go to Connors Bog, a park near the airport, and look for “Ralph.” Koenig called 911 and sped to the park, where he found a poster for a missing dog named Ralph, tacked to a pole. Taped to the poster was a Ziploc bag with a note demanding $30,000 for Samantha’s release. The kidnapper wanted the money deposited into Samantha’s bank account. There was also a Polaroid inside showing Samantha naked and bound—and possibly dead.

His mind reeling, Koenig fired off a text. “Fuck you,” he wrote. “I’ll put $5,000 in. You won’t get a penny more until you prove that my daughter’s still alive.”

As Doll and her team pored fruitlessly over the clues, the kidnapper began making withdrawals around town using Samantha’s ATM card, but security cameras captured only a man disguised in a hooded jacket and ski mask. Then, on March 6, they got a surprise: a report that someone using Samantha’s card had made a withdrawal from an ATM in Arizona. They checked the surveillance footage and saw, again, a man in disguise.

The following day the man made a withdrawal in Texas, and this time, when the surveillance footage was enhanced, Doll saw a couple of clues. The kidnapper was wearing white tennis shoes, and in the distance there was a white 2012 Ford Focus. An APB went out across Texas to be on the lookout. On March 13, Corporal Bryan Henry was driving past a motel in Lufkin, Texas, when he saw a white Ford Focus with Arizona plates parked outside. As Henry called for backup, he noticed something unexpected: another white Focus—this one with Alaska plates—parked across the street. Which car, if either, might be the kidnapper’s?

As the Texas Rangers closed in on the Ford with Alaska plates, Henry saw a lanky man emerge from the motel, climb into the car from Arizona, and drive off. With no time to waste, Henry took chase and, the moment the man broke the speed limit on Henry’s radar, pulled him over. As he cautiously approached the driver’s window, Henry spotted a pair of white sneakers under the passenger seat. The man handed over his Alaska driver’s license. His name was Israel Keyes.

The next day Doll was sitting across from Keyes in a Texas jailhouse. Despite his prison garb, Keyes seemed like a regular guy, calm and cooperative. She took out the ransom note and set it on the table in front of him. “I initially thought that whoever wrote this was a monster,” she told him. “But the more I read it, the more I came to realize that monsters aren’t born; they’re created. And that people who start off on one path end up on a radically different path because of things that people do to them.”

Keyes didn’t flinch. But when Doll, who knew that Keyes had a daughter, talked about James Koenig’s suffering, she saw Keyes’ chin quiver for a moment, as if he were holding back tears. Two weeks later Doll was having lunch when her cell phone rang. “He did it,” her colleague told her. “He killed her.” And Keyes wanted to confess his full story to one person, Doll, for whom he had this message: “Tell her she’s got her monster.”

WHEN HE HEARD the news, Koenig could barely fathom the horror of what had happened to his daughter. Keyes had picked her at random after staking out the conspicuous location. He bound Samantha, then sexually abused and strangled her, leaving her corpse in a shed while—to the cops’ horror—he went on a cruise. When he returned, he dismembered the body and disposed of it in a hole he’d cut in a frozen lake nearby.

But Samantha wasn’t Keyes’ only victim. He also confessed to killing Bill and Lorraine Currier, a couple in Vermont (shooting the husband and sexually assaulting and strangling the wife), and suggested that he had as many as 11 other victims strewn across the country. Four were said to be in Washington State and another on the East Coast. He told police he had left what he called “kill kits” buried near his victims’ locales, which he would retrieve during his spree. Where the other victims were, however, he wouldn’t say.

That’s when Giles and Koenig decided to try to find them. “I’m not one to just crawl into that fucking corner and ‘woe is me,’” Koenig says. “I want to help other families find their kids.”

The moment Giles and Koenig launched their new Facebook page—Have You Ever Met Israel Keyes?—leads began pouring in. People reported seeing a man resembling Keyes all over: California, Vermont, Texas. A woman in Maine swore she’d run into him at a conga lesson.

Using the gathered information, the two spent hours a day assembling a timeline of Keyes’ travels. They used Google Maps to pinpoint where Keyes had been seen, including dates, photos, and news reports. They found photos of him in a Hawaiian lei at his grandmother’s 90th birthday party, a fishing license he’d taken out in Alaska, shots of a cabin he owned in upstate New York.

Piece by piece Giles and Koenig saw a picture of the serial killer’s twisted life emerge. Born to a Mormon couple in Utah, Keyes was home-schooled—and troubled. As a teen in Washington State, he befriended two neighbors, Chevie and Cheyne Kehoe, who were subsequently convicted of murder and attempted murder, respectively. He joined a fringe religious group called the Ark and later spent three years in the Army before becoming a contractor in Anchorage, where he led a quiet life with his girlfriend and daughter.

But secretly he was living a double life: traversing the country and feeding his bloodlust. During an interview with investigators, Keyes said he had been feeling like Jekyll and Hyde for years. “There is no one who knows me—or who has ever known me—who knows anything about me, really,” he told them. “They’re gonna tell you something that does not line up with anything I tell you because I’m two different people, basically. And the only person who knows about what I’m telling you, the kind of things I’m telling you, is me.”

As Keyes stewed in an Anchorage jail, awaiting trial for killing Samantha, Doll kept tabs on the cybersleuths’ detective work. “It’s a grassroots effort, and I commend that,” she says. “They bring resources, they bring time spent at the computer clicking away, throwing against the wall and seeing what sticks.”

Something stuck when a volunteer e-mailed Giles and Koenig a photo of a man who appeared to be Keyes robbing a bank in New York. The hunch was right. News soon hit that Keyes had been

James Koenig at a memorial for his daughter Samantha

“I’M NOT ONE TO CRAWL INTO A CORNER,” SAYS KOENIG. “I WANT TO HELP FAMILIES FIND THEIR KIDS.”

funding his killing spree by robbing banks around the country.

But Keyes soon stopped offering up any clues of his own. On December 2, guards found him in a pool of blood in his cell, his wrists slit with a razor blade, a bedsheet noose around his neck.

AS THE SUN SETS over the icy waters off Anchorage, Koenig drives his truck past one of the many coffee kiosks that dot the city. Since Samantha’s disappearance, he has quit his job as a trucker and now delivers water to the coffee stands—a way to both make a living and keep an eye on the baristas alone behind the counters. There’s just one place he can’t bring himself to visit: Common Grounds. “It’s still hard to go by there,” he says as he stares solemnly out his windshield.

The search for Keyes’ other victims persists. Leads continue to come in—one Facebooker saw the killer in a grocery store in Sitka; another believes her cousin may have been his victim back in 2004. Though the cops still don’t tell Giles and Koenig how or if they’re using their clues, the two won’t give up until all his victims are found.

In the meantime they’re trying to bring support and resolution to others. While tracking down Keyes, they began receiving pleas for help in other missing-persons cases in Alaska. They launched a new site, Seeking Alaska’s Missing, as a clearinghouse. The reward money raised for Samantha’s case is now helping to fund their other investigations as well.

The two have used their crowd-sourcing skills to farm leads for several high-profile cases, including that of Clinton Reeves, who was later found to have been murdered by a fellow Air Force airman, and Shanon Lovell, the missing 30-year-old whose open case led to the angry notes they received on Facebook. Lovell’s body was later found in a lake near Anchorage, and the cause of death has still to be determined.

But they’ve already had some happy endings. After a 16-year-old girl disappeared from her parents’ home in the middle of the night and didn’t return, Giles and Koenig flooded the Net with her picture and details. The girl’s case quickly became a local cause—and ended up smoking out the girl herself, who had run away. “She couldn’t handle the pressure and came back home,” Koenig says. He and Giles had the same success with two other teenage runaways who were spotted as a result of posting their pictures and last-seen whereabouts online.

“The way I figure it, I’m going to get my reward when I get to heaven,” says Giles. “I don’t need to get any here.”

FEBRUARY 17, 2012
Keyes dismembers Koenig’s corpse and dumps it in Matanuska Lake.

Study Abroad

From the pages of Maxim Portugal, meet Spanish stunner ELENA GÓMEZ.

How did you enjoy the shoot today?

I'm very happy with the outcome, all thanks to the Maxim crew. It was like hanging out among friends, and the final photos are incredible.

We agree. You're dating soccer star Javi García.

How did he win you over?

By just being himself! He makes me laugh and feel special. We've been together for over three years, and each day still feels like the first one.

Enough about him.

What else are you up to besides modeling?

I'm finishing my studies in herbal sciences, where I'm learning the benefits of herbs and teas for different diets.

Please report to our beer guts with your findings!

Fortune Teller

Regardless of what our hot new clairvoyant says, things seem to be looking up!

What was the energy like at the Maxim office?

Great! But I've never seen more naughtiness and hidden agendas in people's eyes.

Evil agendas?

Oh, no. I mean guys were pretending to look into the crystal ball but were really staring at...other things.

Your bracelets, obviously. So what do you see in the editors' future?

They'll have to make sacrifices to stay with their queens—their girlfriends.

You mean they're fat and need to lay off the wings?

Well, maybe a little.

Can you see your future?

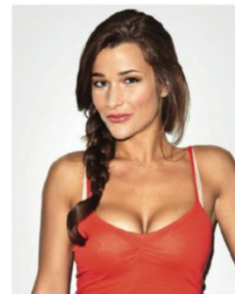

No. All I know is, after work I'm watching Keeping Up With the Kardashians.

What's coming up for the Kardashians?

I'm one of those people who love to hate them, but I have a feeling that Kim and Kanye's baby is going to be president one day.

We can only pray your powers of prediction are off on that one.

She's the One (Night Stand)

Sometimes a girl wants to use you for sex. We have no problem with that.

by ASHLEY ROSS

→ The beauty of a one-night stand is right there in the name: one and done. But even though there isn't a ton of time between the meet and the sheets, there are a million ways to screw up. To keep you from sacking your chances, we talked to women who have had their share of single-serve sex partners and present the banging man's code of conduct for wild, one-night-only sex.

SINGLE HORNY FEMALE

"I think one-night stands are kind of gluttonous," says Sophie,* 25. "It's like sitting down and eating a whole cake." Want to find that cake in hand when you're navigating the scene? Look for signs in the way she acts around you. "When I see a guy I want to sleep with, I touch his arm, say, 'Excuse me,' and look directly into his eyes," says Laila, 27. PDAs are also a green light. Tina, 23, says that if she'll kiss a guy she just met in front of her friends, she's more than willing to leave and finish what they started.

Also, see how willing she is to ditch her friends. "If I leave my girls at the bar, I'm DTF—no question," says Sophie. (Somewhere Pauly D is fist-pumping at that revelation.) And just as she's subtly hinting at it, so should you. "If a guy puts his hand on the small of my back and I'm not comfortable with it, I'll shy away. But if I'm up for a one-nighter, I'll reciprocate by touching him back," says Lori, 25. And when deciding where to get it on, just be practical. "When I'm horny I just want to go wherever is the fastest, most private place we can get crazy—mine or his," admits Sara, 25.

MAKE HER AN OFFER SHE CAN'T REFUSE

When propositioning your lady, ask yourself: What would Ryan Gosling do? As Lori says, "It should feel like Crazy, Stupid, Love when Ryan says, 'Wanna get out of here?'" That charm and casual confidence works."

Amber, 26, got similarly Gosling'd when she met a European businessman at a hotel bar in New York City. After a few drinks he asked her if she wanted to "check out the view" from his room. "He was smooth—plus, in the morning he wouldn't let me put my clothes on, and we had sex while I was wearing nothing but my heels overlooking Central Park." A sex move now known as the Central Pork.

FULFILL HER FANTASIES

It's not every day that women opt for a casual screw—so when they do, they want to make the most of it. That means indulging in some naughty fantasies they might be too shy to bring up with someone they're dating. "I'm always up for something different because I'm never going to see the guy again," says Amber. "Once I woke up at 5 A.M. with a one-night stand and was still really horny, so I made him watch porn and we copied the moves. I wouldn't do that with a new boyfriend, but with him I was completely uninhibited."

Any interest in a one-million-night stand?

If you think your one-night lady seems timid to initiate her X-rated desires, look for clues. Does she have a copy of Fifty Shades of Grey on her nightstand? Is there a gimp suit hanging in her closet? Or just ask. "The hottest one-nighter I've ever had was with a guy who threw me down and said, 'I'm going to do anything you tell me to,'" says Ann, 28. "I ended up handcuffed to the headboard. It was so hot!"

KNOW WHEN TO LEAVE

Even if you're going for round two when you wake up, don't get too intimate. "Cuddles and forehead kisses from a stranger weird me out," says Lori. And skip breakfast. "There's no need to make me pancakes. I'd rather head to brunch with my friends and recap the tale," she adds.

Exchanging numbers is a common courtesy, but chances are you both know this was a one-night thing. But beware: Telling the girl you just put your penis in that you don't want her info may be off-putting. Keep it subtle by simply not asking for it. And don't "friend" her on Facebook: She already got one poke from you—and that's all she needs. 🍷

Kaley Cuoco

When it comes to objects of nerdy obsession, only one person leaves Bilbo Baggins in the dust. It's The Big Bang Theory babe Kaley Cuoco, who has geeks and non-nerds alike drooling every Thursday as hot-as-hell Penny. When she appeared on our cover in 2010, the show's ratings were blasting off like an Ewok being shot out of a laser cannon. And three years later TBBT is still sucking in viewers like a black hole on steroids. Somehow we think Kaley's penchant for tight-fitting tank tops has something to do with that.
